

upon running the `docker image build ...` from the workstation using `docker cli`, the cli packages the entire contents of the docker project directory (which is `Dockerfile` directory) along with the subdirectories and transfers them to the docker engine/host making it available for the image building. Docker engine based on the instructions written in `Dockerfile` will includes/packages the bits of software into the docker image.